

A web server application developed using node.js, ejs and mongo. The application should allow a user to create products which are stored in a mongo database and allow a user to show all of the products listed in the database. The application should have a suitable frontend so that it can be tested.

Note :- only express modules or modules which have been used in the lectures should be used in your assignment